OVERVIEW OF TRAINING

The law enforcement profession is continuing to face significant challenges in its operational and organizational roles. Unfortunately, one of the more pressing issues facing American police departments may be the failure of its supervisors and managers to consistently practice recognized leadership principles they learn in management training programs. Most supervisors and managers seem to take the "path of least resistance" when dealing with problem employees or in communicating with employees. This "wide road of mediocrity" is believed to be the primary path of most managers, and these leadership failures have become a significant form of stress and frustration for the police culture. This program examines why these problems occur and the practical methods managers and supervisors can use to become effective leaders and walk the narrow road of leadership excellence - both at work and at home.
